

Milan Elkerbout

Milan Elkerbout is a Fellow at RFF and the Director of RFF's International Climate Policy Initiative. He works on the interaction between climate and trade policies, in particular. He has worked extensively on carbon pricing and industrial decarbonization. Other topics of interest include CBAM, green industrial policy, corporate climate action, and carbon removal policies.

Elkerbout has led policy research on green steel, carbon capture and carbon removals, carbon leakage, climate clubs and the EU's response to the Covid pandemic, energy crisis, and US inflation reduction act. He has also written on industrial and innovation policy, the trade-climate policy nexus, and supranational governance, working with policymakers, industry, civil society and academia.

Milan has a background in European political economy. Between 2014 and 2023, he was working for CEPS, a policy think tank in Brussels, as a research fellow and head of its climate program. From spring 2019, he spent a year as a visiting fellow at IVL Stockholm as part of the Mistra Carbon Exit research program.
